In this world of human affairs, there is no trouble greater than a boy at the age of fourteen. He is neither good looking nor useful. It is impossible to shower affection on him as on a little boy; and he is always getting in the way. If he talks with a childish lip, he is called a baby, and if he answers in a grown-up way, he is called ill-mannered. In fact any talk from him is resented. Then he is at the unattractive growing age. He grows out of his clothes with indecent haste; and his voice grows hoarse all of a sudden. It is easy to excuse the shortcomings of early childhood but it is hard to tolerate even unavoidable lapses in a boy of fourteen. The lad himself becomes painfully self-conscious. When he talks with elderly people, he is either unduly forward, or else so unduly shy that he appears ashamed of his very existence.
